In the dawn, by highways, subways, alleys and boulevards, by train, bus, subway and car, with transfers in hands, with moist fingers on steering wheels or with numb toes on snowy ground, 8,200 students race the clock to Chicago Circle.

In the dawn
of the quarter . . .

they wait and stand;
 they move from desk to desk;
 they are shuffled
 like the cards they carry
 until everyone is dealt his schedule
 and a new quarter
 at Chicago's University of Illinois can move ahead.

KODAK TRI X PAN FILM

Let's away with study,
Folly's sweet.
Treasure all the pleasure
of our youth:
Time enough for age
to think on truth.

18

So short a day,
And life so quickly hasting
And in study wasting
Youth that would be gay!

'Tis our spring that's slipping,
Winter draweth near,
Life itself we're losing,
And this sorry cheer
Dries the blood and chills the heart,
Shrivels all delight.

Age and all its crowd of ills
Terrifies our sight.

So short a day
And life so quickly hasting
And in study wasting
Youth that would be gay!

COMMITTEE ON THE CHICAGO DEPARTMENTS

David D. Henry

DAVID D. HENRY
President

The President bid them welcome, the class of '69. "... although the University is large, it is dedicated to the welfare of the individual student. In turn, we ask the students to remember that we are all in the public service: the Board of Trustees, the President and central administrative officers, the Vice Presidents, deans, department heads, the members of the faculty.

We serve the State of Illinois, but we do so in the tradition of the great university unbounded by time or geography.

You will be reminded many times that you are, in a sense, charter members of this new campus, coming at the beginning of its first full school year. You will be a part of its traditions, and you will influence its character and mode."

And with these students of the Circle, David Dodds Henry shared his dream. "We have sensed the immortality which goes with youth service, as we anticipate the benefits in the lives of the countless thousands who in the future will here be trained, enlightened, inspired, and dedicated to human service, and we have caught a glimpse of the meaning of a university to a community, a state, a nation and to a world as the generative and local center of the creative forces of a people."

The Circle: composed of lines, squares, triangles.
All symmetrical, all perfect.
Very few curves, just straight lines.

But somehow they go unnoticed; somehow the bleak austerity of concrete and glass is offset by Something.

The Somethings are all shapes, all sizes. They smile, they laugh and they cry.

Our compliments to the

"And I am dumb to tell a weather's wind

Dylan Thomas

1900-1965

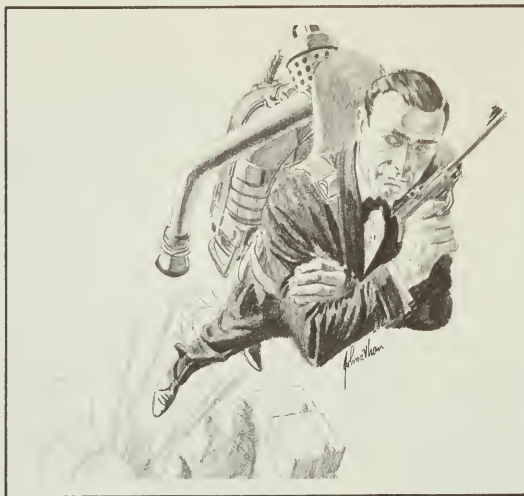

It is hard for some people to grow old without becoming cynical, but I would say to young people: listen to the old and the young courteously but be careful who influences you. If you run across those who see no good in the world, who say everything is going to the dogs and that most people are rascals, don't believe them. But don't reject wisdom from whatever source it may come. Some of your elders have lived a long time, some of them have learned much. The trick is to select the truly wise ones and listen to them.

GOVERNOR ADLAI E. STEVENSON

Chicago, 1950

This year of ours—like every year, an earth's turning once about the sun to warm up, to cool off, to escape the sun's hold, to try to shake off the annoyance on its back—who knows—to find some place to hide—is done. It has been a unique year, but then, uniqueness is a trait we have come to expect of our years.

Still some things seem never to change. Man is still blessed with mortality, and he doesn't seem to like it any more than he ever did. And he is still cursed with ambition, purpose and the "joy" of accomplishment.

A look at school year 1965-1966 reveals, generally speaking, that many of the age-old questions are still around. Questions like: What's for supper? Will he live? How did you do? What will they think of next? Why not do it my way? What ever happened to good-old-what's-his name? Why'd she ever marry him? Who's on first? Do you think we should? Are you serious? Do you think it will last? Is that the only reason? and Why? and the unspoken, perhaps wordless, question of whether IBM or ICBM will decide our future.

But when you are remembering, it will be the unique events that will set this year off from all the rest. We started the year with mixed feelings. Some of us loved and others loathed our new, giant, cement learning machines. University Hall looked like Navy Pier stood on end.

We walked along our chiseled highways to class, or under these highways where almost all of the previous year's mud had now been covered with grass, as green and as tentative as freshmen.

And we sat and baked, like pigeons, all over our exedrae, cooing calculus, politics, and small talk.

In the evening, when the lights transformed the exedrae and the amphitheater, we stood with our dates and looked at the city's sky and thought of guys who had "gone in" first, to get "it" out of the way, and we wondered about our bought time.

THOMAS

And we marveled that the hands moving so swiftly over the clock's face left no trail—showed none of the indecisions, the reversals, nor the "bargain-basement-decisions-we-didn't-make" of our lives. For we belonged to the exclusive human club, and the password was "conflict."

THE STRATEGISTS

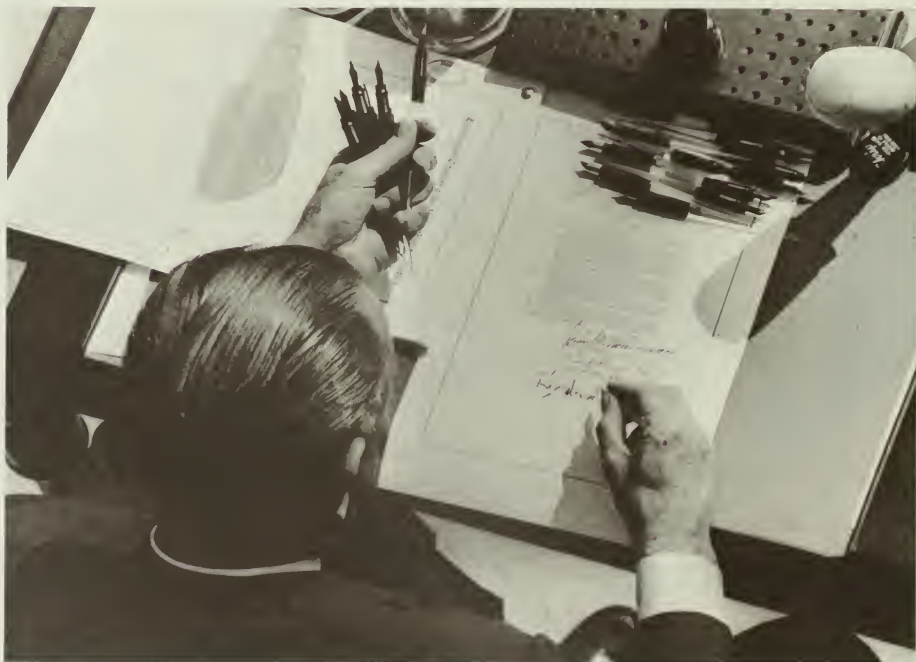

Watts: August, 1965

That word, which they were kind enough to eliminate from our childhood vocabulary, but which makes its way to the forefront of our adult lives, we should now experience in its most grand and awesome aspects: CONFLICT.

104

The War on Poverty is declared; August, 1965

UPI Photo

Overnight we became experts in making decisions and taking sides, whether we liked it or not. The paradox of war amid human progress brought us face to face with important, far-reaching decisions. "Am I my brother's keeper?" was further complicated by such secondary questions as: "Who is my brother?" and "Does he want to be helped?"

105

But for many of us the brother was very real and the commitment undeniable. To still others the issue was the reality of Communism's forceful advance. Amid the confusion it was sometimes difficult to distinguish the individual who simply had no brothers and no interest except for his own safety.

Santo Domingo, Red China, Indonesia: Yesterday they were irregular blue, green, yellow, or pink shapes on a map; today they have faces—faces with eyes focused on us, helping to decide our future, fading with time or growing grotesquely large. Why do we call it a “fun house” when there are so many frightening surprises?

Moscow; November, 1965

The phenomenon of leadership—the individual raised above his peers—fascinates us. We call them “good,” “bad,” “weak,” or “strong” depending upon our point of view, and whether they shape the masses under them, or the masses rule them. In either case they are feared, held in awe, respected, and sometimes loved.

We are told that we live in an age of technology. Our finite minds find it difficult to imagine where we can go from here, but it is exciting to speculate. Limitless extension of the enjoyable use of the five senses and the mind, and the elimination of pain and discomfort in order to heighten the enjoyment, seem assured—if mankind doesn't tire of the game.
